1.0 Why you may need this cover

1.1 I have a P&I/vessel liability policy with you. Do I need to buy Personal Accident cover as well?

If you are relying on your P&I policy to cover accidents and injuries to crew members you will generally need to show that you have been liable under common law or by breaching a statutory duty or that the liability arose under the terms of a Collective Bargaining Agreement approved by the Club. The incident you are claiming for must also be linked to the ownership and operation of a vessel. Our Personal Accident insurance, on the other hand, is a no fault product. It can provide accidental death or permanent disablement benefits for insured persons on a 24 hour basis, whether or not the accident is related to the vessel itself.

1.2 Is there any overlap between the P&I/vessel liability insurance policy and the Personal Accident cover?

There could be and this is one of the factors that we take into account when rating your risk. Whenever there is a possible overlap between the cover, you will see that we discount your P&I/vessel liability insurance premium to take this into account. This will be clearly shown on our quotations.

1.3 Are there any other advantages in buying Personal Accident cover?

Having no fault Personal Accident cover in place as part of your crew welfare provisions suggests a caring employer and may help to recruit top quality crews. It will also protect your claims record on the P&I/vessel liability section of your policy which should help keep your liability premiums down. Personal Accident cover also pays out predetermined benefits, so there is no doubt how much the insured person(s) or their beneficiary/beneficiaries will receive should the worst happen. Payment of Personal Accident claims tends to proceed quickly as there is no need to spend time looking into the question of liability or assessing the value of the claim.

2.0 The insurance we provide and who can be covered

2.1 You offer two types of Personal Accident cover: basic and enhanced. What is the difference?

Both types of insurance provide cover on behalf of insured persons. If you are buying for your crew members they will be the insured persons for the purpose of the cover. You will be the Assured (the policy holder). The basic cover will respond to death and permanent disability due to accidents, with agreed pay outs in the event of death or disability. The pay outs change depending upon the type of disability and reduce in accordance with a scale of benefits listed at the end of the policy. The enhanced cover provides the benefits listed above and in addition includes insurance against temporary total disablement due to an accident or illness. Extra cover is also available for crew members, such as crew medical and travel expenses, crew repatriation costs, crew replacement or substitution costs and cover for loss of crew personal baggage.

2.2 Who can be covered under this Personal Accident insurance?

We can quote fishing vessel crew and general marine crew immediately. We require a little more information for crew members servicing the offshore oil and gas industry and for commercial divers, but in principle cover can be provided for these crew members, too.

2.3 Can I buy Personal Accident cover for people other than crew?

Yes, you can buy Personal Accident cover on behalf of officers and their partners, passengers and guests, amongst others.

3.0 Crew cover

3.1 Are my crew covered for accidents 24 hours a day, 7 days a week?

Yes. Certain activities are excluded, such as rock climbing and hang gliding. See the exclusions listed under the policy terms and conditions.

3.2 Are my crew covered for sickness 24 hours a day, 7 days a week?

Yes, if you have purchased the enhanced cover. As with our previous answer, certain activities are excluded. See the exclusions listed under the policy terms and conditions.

3.3 Are my crew covered for medical expenses 24 hours a day, 7 days a week?

Under the enhanced policy, medical expenses are covered on a 24/7 basis while the crew member is under a contract of employment with you. However, please note that medical expenses in the crew member's country of domicile (the country of nationality) are limited to €20,000 (or currency equivalent) in all.

3.4 I sometimes sign off my crew temporarily. Does this mean they lose their cover for medical expenses?

If it is your practice to temporarily sign off crew on the basis that they are liable to be recalled to the vessel or employed on another of your vessels, this will not effect the coverage we provide for your crew's medical expenses.

3.5 You mention illness in the PA policy but not sickness. Are these the same thing for the purposes of collecting a claim?

Yes.

3.6 Is cover available in the event of long-term illness, such as a stroke?

Under our enhanced policy, if the onset of a serious illness, such as a stroke, results in the crew member becoming temporarily totally disabled (see definition in the policy wording) and therefore unable to carry out his usual occupation, then we would pay a weekly benefit of up to 1,000 of the appropriate currency (maximum usual gross wage) until they return to work or up to 52 weeks, whichever ever sooner, subject to a 7 day waiting period.

3.7 Does my crew member have to be under an employment contract in order to claim for medical and travel expenses?

To be eligible for a claim payment under the medical and travel expenses section of the policy, the crew member must be under a current contract of employment relating to your vessel. If it is the practice to sign off crew on the basis that they are liable to be recalled or employed on another of the your vessels when required, this is acceptable for the purposes of making a claim.

3.8 What about changes in crew?

We should be informed of crew number change as the premiums charged are on a per crew basis.

3.9 What if I have contracts with my crew that pay death and disability benefits and you have already agreed this as covered under the P&I/vessel liability policy?

Providing they fall within the policy terms, the benefits sections of the Personal Accident cover (accidental death, disability) will pay out in addition to whatever you are entitled to collect under the yacht liability section of your Certificate of Insurance.

4.0 General cover point

4.1 Your Personal Accident cover refers to a conveyance limit. What is this?

Both the basic and the enhanced Personal Accident covers contain a conveyance limit. It is the maximum amount we will pay when people are travelling together in a group and an accident happens which affects more than one of them. It is important that this amount is a multiple of the number of crew you have bought cover for, otherwise if exceeded, any claim payable will be reduced in proportion to the number of people exceeding the maximum limit.

4.2 Am I covered for claims arising from piracy?

If the insured person suffers bodily injury, yes. Piracy is normally associated with financial gain and as such is not excluded.

4.3 How would the Personal Accident cover respond to a possible case of drowning?

The Personal Accident cover would pay out the death benefit if after a period of time it was reasonable to believe that death has occurred as a result of bodily injury. The maximum period we will wait to establish whether death has occurred is 60 days, although we may accept the claim earlier than this, depending upon the circumstances. We will ask for a signed undertaking from the beneficiaries and if the presumption of death is subsequently found to be incorrect, the claim paid must be refunded to us.

4.4 Is dental treatment covered?

Dental treatment is only covered arising out of an emergency and when the enhanced Personal Accident insurance option is purchased. Routine dental check ups and subsequent treatment is not covered.

4.5 If I buy a new vessel, does the Personal Accident cover provide protection during the pre-delivery period?

If our P&I/vessel liability policy has been purchased and it extends to cover pre-delivery crew risks, then we can also put in place Personal Accident cover. However, if the liability policy is terminated on delivery of the vessel the Personal Accident cover will also terminate.

4.6 Can you summarise the exclusions under the basic Personal Accident cover?

Broadly speaking, the accidental death and disability section of the basic Personal Accident insurance will not cover death or disablement from or caused by:

- air travel by private means or private plane
- alcohol or (non-prescribed) drug impairment
- chemical or biological agents

- criminal acts
- deliberate exposure to exceptional danger (except in an attempt to save human life)
- driving or riding on motor cycles
- military service
- nuclear weapon or device
- radioactive contamination
- riskier sports such as rock climbing, mountaineering, potholing, hang gliding, parachuting, hunting on, horseback or racing
- suicide, intentional self-injury or insanity
- terrorism
- war.

These exclusions also apply to the accident, illness and disablement section of the enhanced Personal Accident cover.

4.7 The cover contains excluded activities. If an insured person decides to take up some of these activities after the cover has started, what effect does this have on the insurance?

We set our premium rate based on the information which is given to us at the start of the cover. The insurance contains a number of exclusions which relate to more hazardous activities. We recommend that the insured person familiarises themselves with the terms and conditions of the cover so that the limitations or restricted sports, occupations, pastimes and activities are fully understood. Should an insured person decide to regularly engage in any of these occupations, sports, pastimes or activities and we have not been told, then a claim may not be payable. We suggest you keep us advised at all times of any changes which may breach the exclusions of the cover.

4.8 Can my crew obtain cover which protects them whilst skiing?

Yes. You need to ask us to add the Skiing Extension to the policy. Please refer to the terms and conditions of the Skiing Extension.

An additional premium or skiing claims excess (deductible) may be applied.

4.9 Does the Skiing Extension cover snowboarding?

Yes, other than freestyle snowboarding. Please refer to the terms and conditions of the Skiing Extension.

4.10 Does the policy cover death and disablement claims due to venereal disease or AIDS?

Yes. The first version of our Personal Accident policy excluded such claims but happily the exclusion has now been removed and we would pay such claims.

4.11 Does the policy cover death and disablement claims due to pregnancy or childbirth?

Yes. The first version of our personal accident policy excluded such claims but happily the exclusion has now been removed and we would pay such claims.
